Welcome, College Students

An Education Is Essential For Leadership

President Harper of the University of Chicago Says Men Advance as Their Brains Are Active and Trained.

"To be the best and to do the best it is necessary to get just as much education as possible. A young man needs the higher education who would not have needed it two generations since." So said President William Rainey Harper of the University of Chicago.

I sincerely hope that every boy who reads this page is planning to return to school and continue until he has finished the course.

Boys sometimes ask, "Does an education pay?" Here are a few figures that answer that question. Less than 1 per cent of American men are college graduates. Yet this 1 per cent has furnished 55 per cent of our Presidents; 36 per cent of the Members of Congress; 47 per cent of the Speakers of the House; 54 per cent of the Vice-Presidents; 63 per cent of the Secretaries of State; 50 per cent of the Secretaries of Treasury; 67 per cent of the Attorney Generals and 69 per cent of the Justices of the Supreme Court. The boy with no schooling has one chance in 150,000 of performing distinguished service; with elementary education he has four times a chance; with high school education he has 87 times the chance; with college education 800 times the chance.

Never before has there been such a need for educated men as there is today. Hundreds of new positions, requiring educated and trained persons to handle them, are developed annually.

To help meet this need we have developed our public school system, representing America's largest investment in the future betterment of our country. Buildings and equipment alone represent an outlay of eight billion dollars of capital, and the annual school budget is about two and one-half billion dollars. Thirty-seven million boys and girls are going to school. Never in the history of the world has such liberal provision been made for the education of all the youth of the nation.

I think you will be interested in the following figures showing definitely what four years in high school paid in dollars and cents. Statistics show that every day spent in school adds $25.00 to a man's life earnings.

Column one gives the yearly salary of those who left school at 14; column two, the yearly salary of those who left school at 18:

When 14 years of age $200.00	$.....
When 16 years of age 250.00	$.....
When 18 years of age 350.00	500.00
When 20 years of age 475.00	750.00
When 22 years of age 575.00	1000.00
When 24 years of age 688.00	1550.00
Total Salary 11 years $5112.50
Total Salary 7 years	$7337.50

Notice that at 25 years of age the better educated boys are receiving $900 per year more salary, and have already, in 7 years, received $2,225 more than the boys who left school at 14 years have received for 11 years' work.

Emerson remarked once that America is another word for opportunity. That is very true. Perhaps in no other country in the world today are the opportunities for advancement, service and happiness so great as in the United States. But America is another word for opportunity only to the boy WHO IS TRAINED TO MAKE THE MOST OF IT. If you read the biographies of the outstanding men of America today you will see that when they were boys they seized every opportunity for study and advancement.

My advice to every boy is, get a good education, both general and technical. Sometimes, because of financial reasons, it seems as if this would be impossible. But it is my conviction, based on years of experience, that the boy who really wants an education can get it. He may perhaps have to defer his school or college work for a time. He will have to make sacrifices and work hard. But he should make up his mind definitely that he will not be handicapped through all his future life by a lack of education. There are excellent night schools available in most cities. For boys who cannot attend any school, there are splendid home study courses, offering the equivalent of high school and college education.

Men advance only in proportion as their brains are active and trained. My message to every boy is to secure the necessary training for advancement. Cultivate the habit of learning.

The great need of America today is for leaders, men of character, men of action, men of education. It is the boys of today who must supply this need tomorrow.

Get in the habit of looking ahead, planning always for at least a LITTLE more knowledge before you stop studying and learning if you want to be one of tomorrow's leaders.—From "Boys Life," given in Maryville Forum.

Y.M.C.A. Group Will Continue Activities

The Gospel team work of the Y. M. C. A. of the College will be continued through the next year, probably the first service on the proposed fall schedule being conducted the latter part of September at Stanberry.

Through a suggestion made by President Uel W. Lamkin of the College the young men's organization will conduct services in towns throughout the college district at the rate of one a month. This plan of operation will keep the gospel team project in action and at the same time will give the members three Sunday nights a month to use for other purposes.

During the summer the boys undertook a heavy schedule going into eight counties in ten consecutive Sunday nights. The result of their work has had a very good influence in the communities they visited, according to word from time to time to reach the office of President Lamkin and the sponsors of the Y. M. C. A.

In a recent conversation with Stephen G. LaMar, one of the sponsors, and Walter Allen, president of the Y. M. C. A., President Lamkin expressed his hope that the gospel work would continue. He has offered the college bus for use in the work.

Several college men, not members of the Y. M. C. A., who helped the organization out this summer in the project, are making bids for membership in the organization this fall.

The Y. M. C. A. expects to carry out a number of campus activities and to hold regular weekly meetings.

School Leaders Will Have 11 Meetings

One of the 59 conferences of superintendents and principals to be held in Missouri this fall for the purpose of improving teaching will be held in the High School Building in Excelsior Springs on September 16, at 2:00 p. m. The following program has been arranged:

Public Relations.....Price L. Collier
Statewide Arithmetic.....D. H. Kay
Junior High-School Possibilities.....E. M. Lamasters.

Getting the Survey Report Before the People.....W. S. Smith
Improvement of Teaching Through Teachers Meetings.....J. R. Clark
Department Hopes and Plans.....Chas. Myers.

The above talks will be limited to twenty minutes. In addition there will be round table discussion of the following questions:

1. How much time can I spend in effective supervision?
2. How may I secure and maintain a professional library for the use of my teachers?
3. Can I provide for teacher visitation and observation in my school?
4. Have I so consolidated the extra-curricular activities accounting that the work may be simplified and the possibility of criticism avoided?
5. Is there a possibility of cooperative work among the schools of the community in supervising special subjects?
6. What can we do to get effective publicity for the recommendation of the survey commission?

There will be eleven such progressive meetings in the Northwest Missouri District. Mr. Charles Myers, State supervisor for this district, in commenting on the work says he believes that Northwest Missouri has some of the finest school superintendents to be found anywhere.

Students Are Asked to Find Museum Relics

Dr. Henry A. Foster, Head of the Social Science Department Tells of Sundial. Museum Will Grow.

On the College campus, in the rear of President Lamkin's residence and just a few steps to the west of the "long walk" is the S. T. C. Sundial. It might very appropriately be called the J. R. Brink Sundial. It was a gift from him to the College in 1928.

The Sundial is only one of the numerous monuments which now decorate the campus and which are reflective and reminiscent of the service and devotion to the Institution which Mr. Brink for years faithfully served as its superintendent of construction and maintenance.

This "Shadow-clock" is unique in the fact that its base has a history. Its history goes back to western pioneer days and even to France, it is said. The stone is of the famous French Buhrstone (burstone) familiar to the "mill boys" of a generation or so ago. The buhrstone is a siliceous stone formerly used for grinding grain and other soft substances.

These stones, found in most of the grist mills of early American days, came from France. They usually came in fragments and were assembled to be held intact as a unit by strong iron bands. Two of these units were required for grinding. There was a lower stone, the bed, of which was fixed, and an upper stone, the runner, of which was held by a shaft in close proximity to the bed, and which by its rapid revolution caused the grinding to take place. The grain falling from the hopper above the runner, and through an opening in the center of the latter, was crushed between the two stones, the grist being pushed along, meantime by

Superintendent G. Dille Writes On Publicity

Chillicothe School Head, in First of Articles to Appear in Official Bulletin, Discusses Accounting.

There are two kinds of accounting which are paramount to any school system, financial accounting and child accounting, says Mr. C. E. Dille, Superintendent of Chillicothe schools, in his first article in a series which he is writing on School Publicity.

Financial accounting is without question basic by its very nature. The public school's existence as an effective organization depends wholly upon a system of financial accounting sufficient to provide the educational program demanded by the public today. We should not overlook the fact that the public schools belong to the public. For example, the patrons of our community expend $85,000.00 annually to maintain the public school system in Chillicothe. This amount is for current expenses only. In addition, they expend another sum which is not to be ignored—$25,000.00 in interest and bonds for debt service on the Junior-Senior High School. There is no doubt but that the people own the schools. They are responsible for seeing that our schools have adequate financial support, not only this year, but next year, and the next, and so on indefinitely.

This being the case, no well-informed person will deny that the public has a right to know how school funds are being expended. In order that the public might have this information it is necessary for the school board to use a good system of school accounting. The system now in use in our city is the "Accounting Procedure for School Systems" edited by Dr. Fred Engelhardt, Professor of Educational Administration of the University of Minnesota and Dr. Fred Von Borgersrode, Professor of Education at the University of Missouri. This system is endorsed by the leading educators of the country, having been recommended by Teachers College, Columbia University, New York, when the Chillicothe Board of Education adopted it a year ago.

According to Drs. George D. Strayer and N. L. Engelhardt, Directors of the recent Missouri School Survey, this system of accounting is designed to assist in (1) the formulation of the educational program; (2) the proposal of a financial plan for payment of the program; (3) the planning of capital needs for the plant program; (4) the establishment of standards of salaries and wages; (5) the control of material needs through standardization and disbursement.

Secretary Receives Association Dues

The first high school association dues for 1930-'31 have been received from Mr. William E. Booth, superintendent of schools at Fairfax, formerly principal of the high school at Martinsville, according to corresponding secretary Stephen LaMar.

Mr. Booth also says that they have three Maryville teachers in the Fairfax schools. The teachers are: Mr. Oren Hall, coach; Miss Luralee Henna, second grade; and Miss Helen Baker, primary.

The school has been organized on the "Home Room" plan and seems to be running very satisfactorily according to Mr. Booth who also mentioned the fact in his letter that the Fairfax Chamber of Commerce recently gave a school mixer which helped the new teachers to become better acquainted with the school and the town.

Perrin Hall Will Be Students Home

Perrin Hall, which has been silent for a time, will again be a center of activity, for Mrs. Wilson has decided to make it a home for a group of College boys. Meals will also be served for others who care to take them there. The Hall has rooms for seventeen boys. The Y. M. C. A. boys have thought of making it their headquarters.

Voice Recital Will Be Thursday Night

Miss Elizabeth Mills, voice instructor at the College during the last summer and who has been teaching at Southwestern University, Georgetown, Texas, for the last three years will give a voice recital at the Social Hall of the College Thursday evening, September 11, at eight o'clock.

Miss Mills, soprano, is a pupil of Mr. Richman formerly a voice instructor at S. T. C., B. Bronson also formerly of the College Conservatory faculty, and Theo. Lieberhammer of Vienna National Academy. For the last summer she has studied with Mr. H. N. Schuster now of the College conservatory faculty.

Miss Margaret Mills, a former S. T. C. student will act as accompanist for her sister. The home of the Misses Mills is in Grant City.

On Friday following the recital Miss Mills will leave for Texas to take up her teaching duties there. The public is invited to hear the recital program which is as follows:

Bearcats Win In Camp Trials; Ready for 'Biz'

Boys From Various States Are Bidding For Places on the 1930 Bearcat Aggregation—Game Next Week.

Forty-five men, students from Missouri and adjoining states, have turned out and are in daily practice for the 1930 Bearcat football squad. Most of these men have been in practice for several days in the "camp," where big Jim Seely, star tackle, has acted as chief cook, and where the regular program of routine of grub, blisters, sore hands, sore shoulders, fun and hard work has been in effect. Other men will be added to the list with regular enrollment and beginning of school this week.

Coach Lefty Davis began the drill as usual with fundamentals, gradually making way for the finer points of the game. He has twenty-two men who have played Bearcat football before, and most of the remaining twenty-three have played either on high school teams or with other colleges. With competition keen for every position, the selection of the eleven for the first game, with Haskell here, will be a difficult task. Every man will have to work for his position and then work to keep it.

All indications seem to point to a team fully as powerful as that of last season, if not stronger. Only three men were lost by graduation, and new recruits promise to fill the breaks in the ranks. The line will be practically as experienced as before, while the personnel of the backfield will include some different faces. From present practices it appears that the ball-toters will average more in weight than those of 1929.

An early start at practice has been deemed necessary by both coaches Iba and Davis in view of the fact the eleven games scheduled present the hardest football calendar that the Bearcats have faced in years, and will demand the utmost in condition. The present candidates for positions on the 1930 eleven are:

Experienced Bearcats: H. Fischer, R. Milner, R. Mitzell, T. Hodgkinson, C. Russell, N. Bruce, L. Bricken, B. Perkins, W. Dowell, V. Mahood, F. Moore, M. Ruth, M. Search, P. A. Silvers, M. Egder, L. Dunham, J. Seely, R. Dowell, W. Staleup, L. Lewis, H. Catterton, and J. Smith.

New Bearcats: H. Derry, S. Cook, J. Sillers, C. Hedge, D. Sheets, H. Sheets, C. Lewis, L. Phelps, C. Hooper, P. Guess, H. Wilson, M. Knorr, C. Downey, L. Smith, J. O'Connor, F. Link, D. St. John, H. Overmeier, S. Wall, H. Fads and C. Woolsey.

Head of College High Is on Leave

Mr. H. R. Dieterich, head of the College high school, has been granted leave of absence for the coming school year to work toward his Ph. D. degree in the administration of education, at Ohio State University, located at Columbus, Ohio.

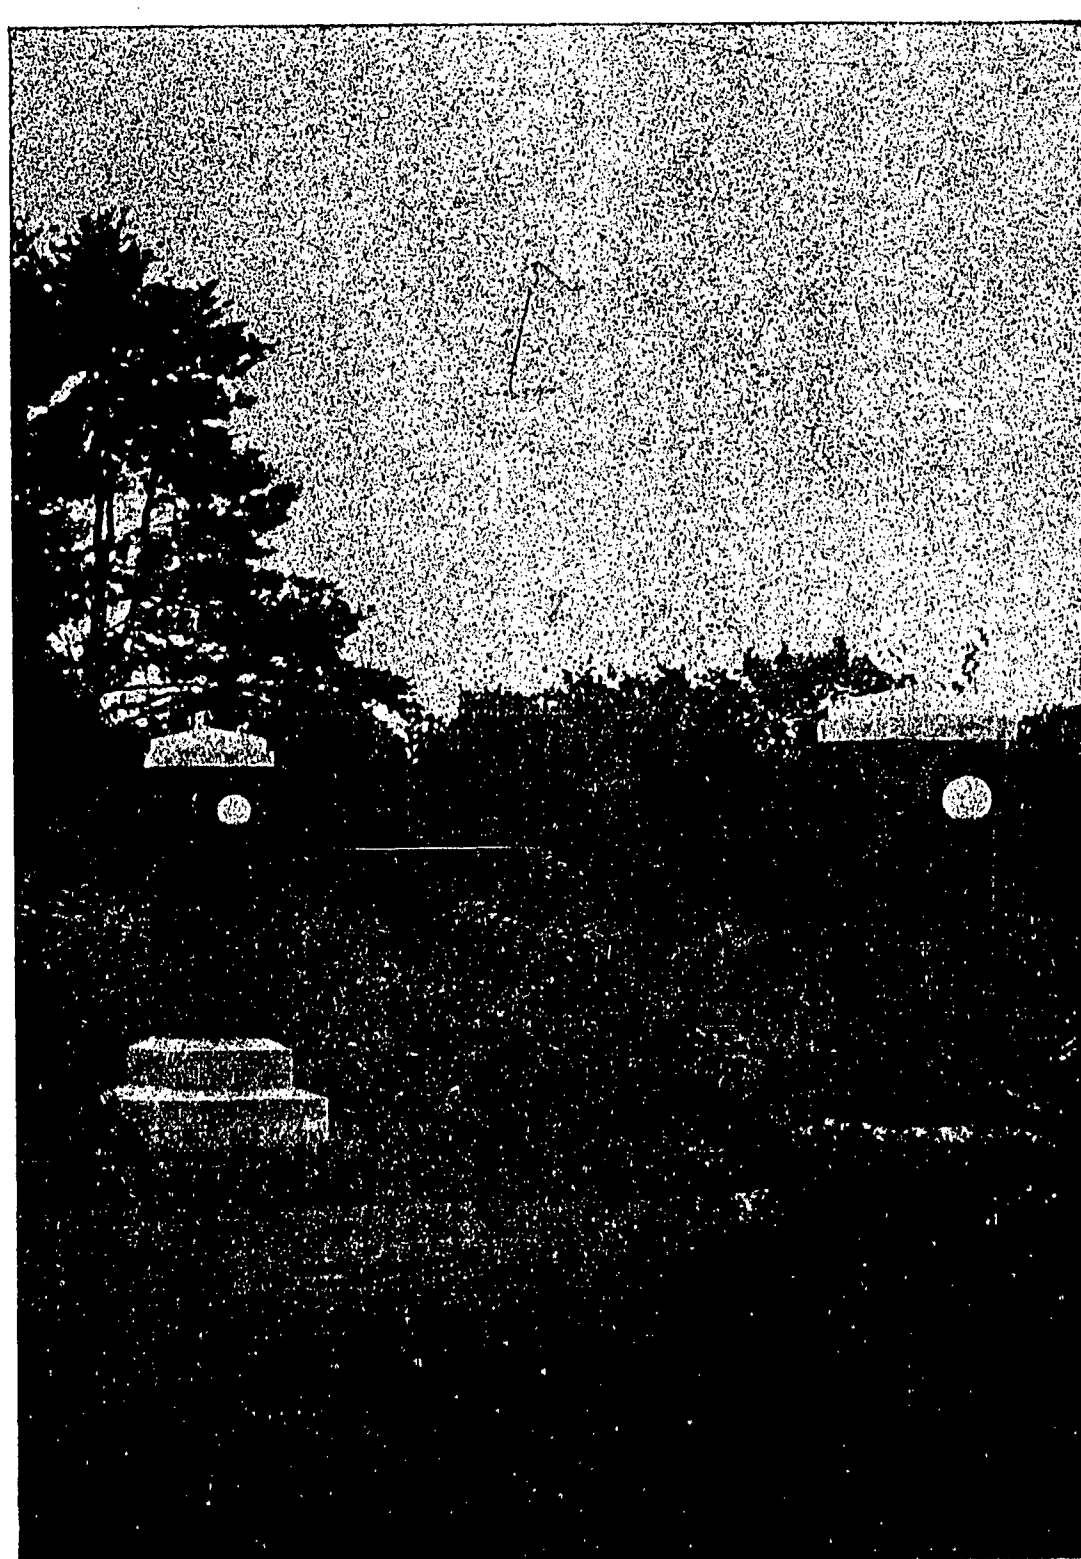

Ohio State was chosen by him not only on account of the school, but also on account of the fact that Dr. D. H. Eikenberry, formerly instructor of education administration at the University of Missouri, one of his former teachers, is now located there. Mr. Dieterich, otherwise known as "Herb," a former principal of the Maryville public high school was active not only in the College high school work, but also in much of the College work, and for this reason he will be greatly missed. One of his greatest tasks during the last few years has been the handling of the Spring Contests.

Mr. L. E. Ziegler known to the people of Maryville as "Zieg," a former outstanding Maryville public school administrator, has been secured to act in the place of Mr. Dieterich.

Mr. Ziegler, who owns "Ziegler's Pharmacy," has done his graduate work at Teachers College, Columbia, New York City.

COLLEGE OATH
"We will never bring disgrace to this college by any act of cowardice or dishonesty. We will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the college. We will never allow the college laws and do our best to inculcate a like respect and reverence in others. We will transmit this college to those who come after us, greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

CAMPUS GOSSIP
There is nothing that will ruin a student's reputation as quickly as will gossip—gossip the favorite indoor sport of people who have no regard for others. Gossip seldom harms the character of him whom it concerns; but it can ruin his reputation. We wonder if the student who heeds the slander he has heard about a fellow student, and perhaps adds a little to it and offers his opinion of the story, realizes what he is doing to the reputation of his classmate? And have you ever noticed that it is usually the fellow who has something to hide that does the most talking about another student? Let us realize that it is just as easy to say something good about a classmate as it is to believe something slanderous, and it is much kinder. The Golden Rule is a pretty good one to follow: "Do unto others as you would have them do unto you."

MODERN SLANG
In my opinion the slangy language of the younger generation that has caused the elders to hold up their hands in holy horror and cry "shocking," warrants all, if not more, of the condemnation it has received; yet it is not without a forcefulness of expression that other words cannot convey. The freedom with which such words as "damn," "hell," and various others fall from young lips makes one shrink back as from a blow and long to deafen his ears. Other expressions such as "tie that outside," "so's your Aunt Emma," "you're crazy with the heat," "don't be a wet blanket," and so on are utterly incoherent when heard by an outsider—or, by that I mean, one not accustomed to hearing them applied to mean as their meaning is commonly accepted by youth. Few of the mature people of today use slang, and if one of them were to be caught up in some of the conversations carried on by young people he would doubtless be bewildered by the meaningless jargon and chatter sounding incessantly and so discordantly on his ears. At the same time, public speakers, supposedly users of the "King's English," resort to the popular cant for words to make their meaning clear; for instance, in explaining the removal of someone from a position the phrase "give him the bounce" might be used. But when speakers use such terms they usually justify themselves by saying "to use the slang expression," conveying the impression that it is out of the ordinary for them to use slang, as perhaps it may be. Yet is it my belief that without these words to which to resort, speech would lose some of the candor and force that it needs to be interesting.—M. E. L.

TO TEACHERS: A TRIBUTE
Among the constructive influences of life a high rank must be assigned to teachers. Theirs is a work of fundamental and far-reaching importance for which there can be no substitute. Each new generation must pass through their hands, there to receive an impress destined to endure.

Every successful life owes much to the teachers of its youth; and both mediocrity and failure may look back upon neglected opportunities which teachers strove in vain to make clear. Achievement in life, in all its conspicuous forms, must ever pay tribute to the teachers who early guided the mind toward a realization of its capacities.

With increasing confidence parents have given to teachers more and more responsibility for the training of children; and both the family and the community look to the teachers in our various educational institutions to uphold our standards of culture and intellectual attainment.

Surely the calling of the teacher should ever be characterized by dignity and importance. And surely the lives of teachers must be greatly enriched by the satisfaction of giving a priceless service, and by the enduring affection and esteem of those whom they have directly benefited.

Member of Club Writes Article About Dreams

Miss Mildred Sandison, Student in the College and Member of the Writers Club, Classifies Her Dreams.

As a connoisseur of dreams, I do not view them in the same light as do psychologists and physiologists. The former, I am told, regard dreams from the standpoint of emotional tension or inhibition. The latter analyze them in terms of brain structure and food. I look upon dreams from neither of these scientific viewpoints. Especially am I irritated by the frequent—and logical—assertion that the size and substance of one's dinner influences his dreams. I refuse to believe that my nocturnal excursions into wonderland are influenced by anything less than magic.

Let others revel in "Tired Nature's sweet restorer, balmy Sleep;" I envy them not their tranquil dreamless slumber. My last drowsy thoughts at night are anticipations of dreams which are to come. Almost my first waking thoughts are of the dream just past. If the dream is hazy and elusive, I attempt vainly to remember it. Sometimes I am utterly unsuccessful and it remains always a haunting, unsolved riddle. Other dreams, with intriguing subtlety, tremble on the border of my consciousness, and I desperately strive to catch them before they drift off into oblivion. Gradually the mental fog clears and the dream is sharply outlined. Still other times, a flash like lightning reveals fragments of a dream, and the rest is forever tantalizingly vague. However, if the dream is immediately vivid and easily called to mind, I classify it then and there.

Yes, I classify it. Long years of experience in the art of dreaming have convinced me that there are many types of dreams. I divide them into five classes: didactic, historic, mysterious, horrible, and delightful.

The first dream that I can remember is a didactic one. I was sitting in a "high-chair" in the kitchen. I must have fallen asleep, suddenly I saw a face pressed against the window pane. I shall never forget that face. Cruel and red, its most repugnant features were the two horizontal slits through which pierced flaming eyes. Protruding from the forehead were two sharp horns. I realized with awful wonder that this creature was the "bad man."

I did not call him the devil in those days. The slim, sinuous figure glided past the window and I knew that the door was his destination. Horror-stricken, I waited.

Of course I awakened as he entered the door. Doesn't one always wake at the climax of a dream? To my childish imagination, however, it was nothing short of a miracle that the devil had not come in. Memories of him stayed with me long, and, though I do not remember, I will venture to say that I was a docile child for several days. Even yet the fleeting thought of that satanic face is not pleasant.

Then there are the historic dreams. Everyone has them, I suppose. I have had innumerable ones. Through them I have really seen and talked with Caesar (that was when I was in high school) with Washington, and with the Prince of Wales. My experience with the Prince was truly thrilling. I rode through the woods in a coach with him and his sister, who was, conveniently, my age. I have taken part in many wars. My most outstanding experience occurred during the Civil War when my brother was heart and soul for the North and I, for the South. We fought a great battle in the dining room. Union and Confederate armies gathered at the windows of the house, and the generals declared that if my brother won, the North would win the war, and if I won, the South would be hailed as victors. Each of us fought with zeal for our noble cause, but I awoke before either of us conquered.

The mysterious dreams, which are the most numerous of all, are no less interesting but a little more confusing than the rest. One is likely to start to school wearing a green dress and carrying an algebra book and then find himself in China eating rice with a fountain pen, or jumping from an airplane with an umbrella as a parachute.

Once I dreamed I was dead. It was the strangest feeling. The doctor said that my heart was not beating, and so I knew that I was dead. I was puzzled by the fact that being dead was so much like being alive except that I was content to lie motionless with my eyes closed. I was dressed in white satin, and wore a wreath of white roses. I thought to myself that white was not my becoming color. I was amused, yet not a little pleased, at the stir I was causing. I enjoyed the funeral. It was not until I thought of being buried in the ground that I wished I were alive again. I wondered if I could stop being dead. And then the next thing I knew I was at a party eating apples.

The horrible dreams I do not care to discuss or even contemplate; they are too realistically unpleasant. They cover almost every horror imaginable. I sometimes wake, sobbing, and discover with aching relief that it was only a dream, a nightmare that I experienced.

The loveliest dreams are the delightfully pleasant ones. Here I take all the journeys, experience the joys which I have coveted always. Romance and adventure, love and happiness, abound. One night not so long ago fully a half dozen of my cherished desires were fulfilled. So perfect was it that my heart sang, "God's in His heaven; all's right with the world." I felt that I must pinch myself to prove that it was reality. The pinch, actual or imagined, was effective. I awakened, still blissfully saturated with well-being. It was several minutes before I came to earth with the proverbial thud.

The only trouble is that delightful dreams do not come at my beckoning. Although I concentrate on rose-colored thoughts just before going to sleep, it is with no assurance that rose-colored dreams will result. I am reminded of the whimsical words of the poet:

"If there were dreams to sell,
Merry and sad to tell,
And the cryer rang the bell,
What would you buy?"

I answer that there are dreams to sell and we may buy them easily. After all, the best dreams are not the tantalizing fragments from the unknown world of sleep. The best dreams are the beautiful, fascinating, inspiring day-dreams, where we "set our fancies free." The supply is unlimited, the treatment, our own. And the subject matter? Of what does one dream? Ah, that is a secret, for who shall speak lightly of, who shall reveal, his most precious dreams—his reveries!

Des Moines Youths Will Be in School

"There is more than one way of killing a cat and still be within the law," says Jerome Smith an S. T. C. student who is playing a game of chess thru the mail, by means of postal cards, with a former classmate, George Potts, of Drake University at Des Moines, Iowa.

Smith, who has had a year at Des Moines University and a year at Drake, has been in Maryville and surrounding towns this summer, selling books, and is looking forward at the present time to the law profession. In commenting on the game he says that in the close up quick games Potts usually beats him, but that he thinks in the slower game by mail he has him beaten as the game now stands.

In looking through his D. M. U. annual the other evening Jerome was pleasantly surprised when he happened to find a notation concerning the debate team of which he was a member in Des Moines, which gave the information that S. T. C. had debated D. M. U. On looking through his book of newspaper clippings, he happened to find one which gave the incidents of the contest in which the S. T. C. men's debate team which consisted of Glenn Duncan, a junior, and Wiley Poleson, B. S. 1929, had lost to D. M. U., while the S. T. C. women's team consisting of Cleola Dawson, now a senior, and Martha Hordidge, B. S. 1930, had been victorious in their clash with the women's team of that school. When planning to enroll in S. T. C. this fall Smith did not think of S. T. C. as the Northwest Missouri College which he had debated against, and he looks forward with pleasure to work with Glenn Duncan, his former rival, and other S. T. C. students.

Dalo Missildine, a former Drake student, a friend of Smith's, and whose father is the attorney for Polk County which is the county in which Des Moines is located, is also planning to be in school here. While the boys will probably be interested to an extent in business administration courses, they are specially interested in the new department of speech.

Smith, when a student in North High in Des Moines from which he was graduated, was editor for a time of the high school paper. He is also a good tennis player and plans to make some of his expenses while here in College by repairing, especially restringing, tennis rackets, since there is no one here in town now who does this work.

Missildine, when a sophomore in high school in Des Moines, won the City Championship in extemporaneous speaking.

Chillicothe Schools

The enrollment in the Chillicothe schools for the first week was 1360, according to "Chillicothe School Topics." The paper from the office of the superintendent also carries the information that Chillicothe teachers are always 100 percent in enrollment in the State Teachers Association and that last year every member of the school board was enrolled.

The Seven Mistakes of Man

1. The delusion that individual advancement is made by crushing others down.

2. The tendency to worry about things that cannot be changed or corrected.

3. Insisting that a thing is impossible because we ourselves cannot accomplish it.

4. Refusing to set aside trivial preferences, in order that important things may be accomplished.

5. Neglecting development and refinement of the mind and not acquiring the habit of reading and study.

6. Attempting to compel other persons to believe and live as we do.

7. The failure to establish the habit of saving money.—Exchange.

The Stroller

By I. I. I.

Ladocx and gentlemen, hip hip hooray. School days have come, and is the Stroller glad? Do you know about the hardest thing the Stroller has to do is to wait between quarters, and kill all that valuable time that might be spent finding some scandal about the school or on some student. But the good old days are about to commence again.

Mr. Stroller has been having the time of his life just watching the student register. You know he sits behind a far seeing birdseye and watches everything that happens. And some things do happen when the Freshies commence. It was really funny to see the eyes bug out and the ears twitch when Miss Pike began telling them how to handle their knives and forks, and when Mr. Cooper gave a few hints on pecuniary matters. But those were not the only happenings. How many of the Freshie boys were not looking at those newly met pairs of feminine eyes, and how many of the feminine eyes were not shyly glimpsing now and then at the big, strong, proud masculinity of the class of 1934?

But that is not the funny part of it. Do you know that by actual count 66% of the students seen in the west library on Freshman registration day were underclassmen? And most of them were polishing their glasses. Even Duck Dowell seemed to be perfectly satisfied with the "Freshman Crop," and surely he never looked at a girl before in his life.

Everything about "Our Office" seemed to be functioning as usual. The "boys of the college" are on their toes, especially near the phone, telling the belated and mud-stuck prospectives that they may enroll a day late if they can't possibly make it today.

And the Stroller sees things around the dormitory that really lighten her heart (Notice the her? More about that later). The old familiar spots seemed to be in shape for a new season after a quite strenuous one last year. The dance floor is brand newly polished, and indications seem to point to a full scale production of dances, acquaintances and dates.

By the way, the change of gender above was not erroneous. For the benefit of the newcomer, the Stroller wants to take this opportunity to introduce himself, herself, or what have you? The Stroller, with all respects to the Pathe newscast, sees all, hears all, and knows all, and what's more, tells all. He, or she (again take your choice) is always in the library, all the classes, at the dormitory, especially when things go on a rampage, at the Greek letter homes, and everywhere else that have anything to do with student life. How is it possible? That's your question and we will settle it by adding "Why bring that up?", again, with apologies. You are invited to discover the Stroller, because his greatest delight is to watch you all the time and laugh at your efforts, which can't possibly succeed. And don't worry, he will see that you have plenty of fun, and at the same time let you furnish a bit of it.

Have you noticed that we are going to have the championship football and basketball teams this year? If you don't believe it, just ask the Stroller for proof. He will furnish it next spring, and in the meantime will be disappointed if you don't do your part. But seriously, we Beardsalls have everything that it takes to win. We have letter men, experienced men, and new men and the best coaching staff in the state. Only one thing is lacking. Jack McCracken hasn't done a single dance for the dorm girls yet. And can he dance?

Well, come on kids; start your antics. We gotta get this old institution back into full swing. The paddles have to be warmed up, and classes attended, and with it all, the old spirit has got to come too. Let's fight 'em.

Suggested Mottos

Dorm girls who seldom clean their rooms—"Be it ever so jumbled, there's no place like home."
Dramatic Club—"Let's go through life acting better."
Sigma Tau Boys—"Stags at bay."
Geography Classes—"Around the world with Mr. Cauffman."
Football Boys—"When we go on the field we can't sit down—when we come in we can't stand up."
Hush Slingers—"None but the brave deserve the fable!" or "We are in the soup!"
Gym Classes—"Versatility, wim and vigor."
Mr. Wells—"Out, I say! Thou shalt not converse within my domain."
Tri-Sigs—"If at first you don't succeed, Tri, tri again!"
Alpha Sigs—"The long and the short of it—The Alpha and the Omega."
Art Club—"Looking at the world through rose-colored glasses."
Sigma Tau Delta—"Every day in every way—Our imagination increases."

And attend the Heavenly Mass,
I'll expect the Head Angel to close it
With "go to your third hour class."
